

Choices Role Play

Modesty

My friends and I are at the mall. We are buying swimsuits for an upcoming pool party. All of us are LDS. I was surprised to see both of my friends trying on bikinis. They told me that I would be the only one in a full piece and people would think I was a total geek.

Education

I am so tired of all my homework. If I spend time studying every night I have absolutely no time to be with my friends. If I don't study I can still get by with like a B- or C+ at the worst. That's what most of my friends are doing. They told me they have a couple answer sheets to upcoming quizzes if my grades drop too low. I'm not sure what to do.

Scriptures

My Young Women leaders have challenged us to read the scriptures each night. I have an app on my phone with the scriptures so it's pretty convenient. I spent about 15 minutes the past couple nights reading. My friends are asking me why I'm not on my phone being a part the group texting. They are also posting fun stuff on Instagram. They said it's a ton of fun and I'm missing out. I don't have time to do both but I don't want to be the only one who is out of the loop.

Sabbath Day

I am one of the captains of our Volleyball team. I have played volleyball for as long as I can remember. I have a great group of friends on the team. There are 2 other Mormons besides me. We made it to State Finals and I was so excited until I saw the schedule. Our 2nd game is on a Sunday. My teammates are telling me that if I play just this once it's not a big deal. They said I owe it to the team because I'm a captain. My other two LDS friends say they are playing.
